Lunch

Professional chefs, on-site produce gardens, locally-sourced ingredients, and take-home meals for dinner...clearly, this is not your father's cafeteria. More and more, today's companies and universities consider their dining facilities a tool for recruitment and retention, and a valuable asset for increasing productivity and morale.

Culture

Not every meal is about the food. The most innovative dining space is a place to be seen, not just a spot to grab a bite between meetings or classes. More and more, that cup of coffee with a colleague can spark a new idea, and the impromptu team meeting in the comfort of the campus or company café can lead to a long-awaited breakthrough.

Sense

Corporate or campus dining isn't limited to a single large and impersonal cafeteria anymore. In a world where multiple smaller, more intimate, even themed spaces for grabbing a bite and catching up with co-workers are the norm, budget-friendly table lines start to make a lot of sense. With Sense tables from Berco, you really can do more with less.

Starfire

When you envision your dining space in use, do you see students pulling tables together to include a bigger group, or coworkers leaning or sitting on the edge of the table to share a new idea? If so, or if you're designing a café with heavy tops, you'll definitely appreciate Starfire's cast iron cross-base construction, built to withstand all the bumping, leaning, and moving your users can throw at it.

Voyager

Versatile enough to work in any environment, from coffee bar to full-service cafeteria, Voyager offers a banquet of options, along with upgraded construction for stability, strength, and longevity.

AnyWay

Today's workplace is demanding, and all too often the only break from the hectic pace is the few minutes spent in the relative comfort of the corporate café. The flat foot panel found on all AnyWay tables not only creates the ideal comfortable resting place for feet, it's also non-intrusive for the eye, allowing the beauty of your space to work its magic.

Mobi

If you're looking for lunch hour chic, put Mobi on the menu. Mobi's arched foot design keeps the table base out of the way wherever you pull up a chair, and the availability of two-tone color combinations for leg and foot add up to a contemporary on-trend look for your space.

Vortex

The powerful swirl of beauty and grace come together in the trumpet-shaped Vortex...it's lunch like you've never seen it before. Perfect for executive dining, bistro settings, and any space where you want to make a powerful impression.

Discus

Less really is more. The classic base of Berco's Discus line lends a clean look to any space. Every Discus base comes equipped with 6 adjustable leveling glides, so joined tables will always be even, even on uneven floors.

Excalibur

Lunches may not be as heavy as they once were, but that doesn't mean that the lunchroom isn't getting heavy traffic and use. Excalibur wields the strength of a solid bar stock steel base, sturdy enough for solid surface tops and heavy traffic, offering unparalleled durability.
